Dear Friends of Girl Scouts of New Mexico Trails,

To our dedicated volunteers and members, thank you! You make Girl Scouts possible in your community. You show up for girls. You give your time, share what you know, and encourage them to do more than they thought they could. Behind the accomplishments in this report are people like you who helped girls get there.

This year, we saw that commitment reflected in girls across our council. They ran cookie businesses, served their communities, earned awards, and discovered new interests. Our Product Program demonstrated their entrepreneurial spirit and the tremendous support of volunteers and families. We also celebrated more girls earning the Girl Scout Gold Award, our highest achievement, through projects addressing needs in their communities.

We made important strides in expanding and diversifying our programming, including virtual experiences that bring Girl Scouting to girls regardless of geography or proximity to traditional program locations. We worked with more Community Partners to help us create impactful programming. These efforts reflect an important shift in how we think about access. In a state as geographically vast and diverse as New Mexico, we must continue finding new ways to meet girls where they are, creating opportunities that fit their interests, their communities, and the realities of their families' lives.

Perhaps one of our most exciting developments was the launch of our Girl Advisory Group, creating another avenue for girls to help shape the experiences and opportunities we offer. After all, who better to help us imagine the future of Girl Scouting than the girls themselves?

That belief in girl leadership was especially evident at the National Council Session in Washington, D.C., where our girl representatives made us incredibly proud. Their thoughtful participation, confidence, and willingness to engage in conversations about the future of our Movement were inspiring. But what touched me most was witnessing the friendships they formed, the encouragement they gave one another, and the genuine joy they found in celebrating each other's voices and accomplishments. They reminded us that leadership is not simply about finding your own voice—it is also about helping others find theirs.

We also strengthened opportunities for membership engagement, hosting three delegate feedback sessions over the summer. Listening to those who represent our membership is essential as we navigate change and build a Council that is responsive, relevant, and connected to the communities we serve.

Our first Badge Bash brought community leaders, supporters, and friends together to try badge activities themselves. It was a joyful introduction to what girls experience in Girl Scouts and an opportunity to build support for bringing those experiences to more girls. It was a wonderful reminder that when people experience even a little of what Girl Scouting offers, they better understand the power of what their investment makes possible for girls.

Alongside these accomplishments, we also faced some of the most consequential decisions about our council's future.

The decision to sell a camp property was not made lightly. We recognize the deep emotional connections, memories, and traditions associated with our properties. Those experiences are part of our collective Girl Scout story and will always matter.

Honoring that history also means accepting responsibility for our future. Our obligation is to ensure that Girl Scouting remains financially and operationally sustainable, that outdoor experiences remain central to our mission, and that we can invest in accessible programming that reaches more girls across New Mexico.

That responsibility carries particular meaning as we celebrate 110 years of Girl Scouting in New Mexico. Just four years after Girl Scouts began, it took root here. Generations of volunteers, families, and supporters have carried it ever since. We now have the opportunity to build on their work and ensure that girls can benefit from Girl Scouts for generations to come.

Our Every Girl strategy will guide that work: strengthening support for current troops and volunteers while creating more ways for girls to participate. Through community partnerships, mobile programming, and more staff-led experiences, we can bring Girl Scouts closer to girls who have not yet had the opportunity to join us.

I am grateful to our board, staff, volunteers, families, partners, and supporters for the time, care, and resources you give to this council. Most of all, I am grateful to our girls. Their ideas, accomplishments, and willingness to try remind us why this work matters.

Thank you for all you make possible today, and for helping us extend that opportunity to the next generation of Girl Scouts.

In sisterhood, service, & Scouting,

Celia Tellez
Chief Executive Officer
Girl Scouts of New Mexico Trails

Girl Scouts are bold, brave, and ready to make their mark!

Research shows that the longer girls are Girl Scouts, the more likely they are to find success and satisfaction in life. This is even more true for girls who earn our Highest Awards.

More than 150 of our girls showed that they are civic-minded leaders by achieving a Highest Award.

For these awards - the Girl Scout Gold, Silver, or Bronze Awards - girls identify community needs, think critically to solve problems, advocate for themselves and others, and feel empowered to make a difference.

GSUSA Gold Award Scholarship

Gold Award Girl Scout Naomi Brundage earned a national scholarship from Girl Scouts of the USA for her project, Breaking Barriers: Empowering Diversity in Tennis. Her work expanded access to tennis for underserved youth and created lasting partnerships that will continue promoting inclusion and opportunity in New Mexico.

Creating Entrepreneurs

Girl Scout Entrepreneur Programs are important building blocks for Girl Scouts to follow their dreams. Along the way girls gain important skills like confidence and relationship building. Whether they use their sales to spend a night under the stars today or build a rocket to the moon tomorrow, there's no telling what barrier-breaking experience they'll unbox next!

Cookie Boss Patch Program

Thank you to all the businesses and organizations that supported our 2026 Cookie Bosses. Through the Cookie Boss Patch Program, Girl Scouts built their communication, organization, and responsibility skills as they learned to build cookie partnerships and close a deal!
